Town Council to takeover Princes Risborough Festival

Princes Risborough Town Council has agreed to take over the Annual Town Festival following the resignations of a number of the current Festival Committee members.

The Festival has run for 20 years, initially organised by the Town Council. In 1997 the Festival was taken over by a Festival Committee who have managed the event ever since.

Outgoing Festival Chairman, Richard Stevenson said “the committee have done a fantastic job over the years to organise the Town Festival. The committee comprises of local volunteers, the majority of which have full time jobs. For a variety of reasons many of the committee are unable to continue. I am very pleased however to hand over to the Town Council to ensure Festival 2016 takes place”.

Town Mayor, Cllr Alan Turner said “we wish to thank all those that have been involved in promoting our wonderful Town and managing the Annual Festival events. Their dedication and commitment has been nothing more than admirable”.

Princes Risborough Town Council now looks forward to continuing this significant Town event and further information will be published in the next issue of Crosstalk.
